

RITA JUPE

Rita Jupe is principal of The Jupe Group, a facilitation, leadership coaching and organization development consultancy. Clients include multilateral development organizations, financial services companies and associations. Rita is a former director of communication and marketing at the International Fertilizer Association (Paris and London). Previously, she worked at the International Finance Corporation, a member of the World Bank Group, where she advised executives on leadership communication and organizational change, led communication for global advisory services and served as speechwriter to the CEO. Before that, Rita was an account supervisor for pharmaceutical clients at Dezenhall Resources, a boutique crisis management and public affairs consultancy in Washington, DC. Her first career was in journalism, starting at her hometown newspaper in the United Kingdom and finishing at CNN's Washington, DC, bureau as a producer. She is an ambassador with ISC Group, which provides personal, professional and business development for women in insurance. Rita earned a master's in science foreign science, with distinction, from Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. She lives in Alexandria, VA.